

Anne Louise Thompson is a Senior Program Associate at Learning Innovations at WestEd contributing expertise in local and state level special education leadership and service delivery, federal fiscal requirements, systems change, policy implementation, and program evaluation. In addition to working with local directors of special education and school level staff to improve outcomes for students with disabilities, she is with the National Center for Systemic Improvement (NCSI) and the Center for IDEA Fiscal Reporting (CIFR). Formerly, the Connecticut State Director of Special Education, district level special education and Title I administrator, and special education teacher of students across the age/grade ranges and with a variety of disabilities, she has lectured nationally and internationally, and authored numerous articles, resources and a book in education and on leadership.

Thompson received a BS in special education from Indiana University of Pennsylvania, and an MA in educational psychology from the University of Connecticut. She currently is a doctoral candidate at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst in educational policy, research and administration. Anne Louise lives and works from her Machiasport home office in Down East Maine.